The Weekly Update

February 5, 2026

FEBRUARY IS

BLACK HISTORY MONTH

Crispus Attucks

Reported to be the first martyr of the American Revolution, Crispus Attucks was the first fatally shot at the Boston Massacre on March 5, 1770.

Even as a slave, in 1773, at about 20 years of age, Phillis Wheatley became the first African American woman to publish a book of poetry in America. Soon thereafter she was freed, and became an advocate for George Washington and the Revolutionary War for independence.

Phillis Wheatley

James Armistead Lafayette

This spy of the American Revolution worked his way into the service of British General Charles Cornwallis. His intelligence reports of July 31, 1781, were key to preventing the British from getting reinforcements to Yorktown, resulting in their surrender on October 19, 1781.
